Mosaic

I'm not usually a big crafter, but with reflections on our theme of restoration and the history of glass in the Toledo area, I tackled a mosaic project last month.

I came across a paving stone kit on sale from Michael's and took a few days to experiment with the different colors and patterns before finally committing to mix and pour cement into the mold and place the pieces of glass into their spots. When the cement dried some, I pressed letter stamps into the white empty strip and made it a father's day gift. The paving stone is now out by the grill in my parents' back yard.

It's yet another image for me of how different seemingly broken bits can be made into something beautiful, whether it's the pieces of our lives or the body of Christ coming together.

We hope your summer is restorative and is allowing places for refreshment, restoration, and beauty.

In other news, workshops are lining up, and you'll have the opportunity to sign up as you arrive. We'll be posting workshop information on our Facebook page as well as other information, so keep checking in!
